

Join the flight to end Polio for good!

An Invitation to become partners in a remarkable humanitarian endeavour.

In 2022, Ken Hutt OAM, Berry local, former Police Rescue Officer, Rotarian, mountaineer and paraglider, led an ambitious expedition. He would attempt a world-first, government-sanctioned paraglider flight from the summit region of Mount Everest.

The purpose of the expedition was never about personal glory. The objective was singular: A world where no child will ever suffer from polio again.

Despite months of preparation and years of training, Ken was forced to abandon the final ascent after developing a serious chest infection. The decision undoubtedly saved his life. Yet the expedition was far from a failure.

Ken and the team have already succeeded in bringing international attention to the fight against polio, generating widespread media coverage and raising hundreds of thousands of dollars.

But the mountain and challenge remain.

So does polio. While it's been eliminated from most countries on earth, the disease still threatens vulnerable children in the three-remaining polio-endemic regions (Nigeria, Pakistan and Afghanistan).

That's why Ken and his team are currently preparing for a second and final attempt.

This final Everest attempt can help ensure that future generations know polio only through history books.

A legacy beyond Everest

Corporate sponsorship is required to enable the expedition team to undertake the considerable logistical, training and operational requirements associated with a high-altitude Everest mission.

The world stands on the threshold of achieving what once seemed impossible—the complete eradication of only the second human disease in history.
